

Body Language

In this short workshop, the focus lies on non-verbal communication which entails every aspect of communication besides the words itself: Posture, gesturing, voice, facial expressions, originality and spontaneous expression and personality. The application of these skills is directly transferable to the performance, delivery and effective messaging of scientific presentations, poster presentations and interview situations, which are all existential to a scientific career.

This workshop is particularly geared towards finding individual solutions discovering and developing one's personal, convincing style and becoming more and more versatile in the communication of scientific content.
